Everest Institute – Southfield Names Miceli President

Southfield, Mich. – Tara Miceli of Carleton, Mich., has been appointed president of Everest Institute in Southfield. In her new position, Miceli will oversee all administrative departments, including admissions, student affairs, educational programming and community and business relations.

Miceli joined Everest in May of 2010 and served as the northeast regional director of admissions before training to replace former campus president Virginia Goble, who is now a regional vice president of operations for Everest.

With more than a decade of experience in corporate finance and higher education, Miceli brings to the position a strong background in management, training, operations, recruitment and customer service.

"Tara is a strong leader with a keen eye for detail and proven strength in managing multiple departments," said Sean Quinn, regional vice president of operations for Everest's Midwest campuses. "The Southfield campus, which trains and successfully assists in the placement of students in high-demand occupations, will continue to excel under her direction."

Miceli holds a master's degree in corporate finance from Walsh College in Troy, Mich., and a bachelor's degree in financial management from Northern Michigan University.

Everest-Southfield, located at 21107 Lahser Road, offers a variety of programs for full-time and part-time students, including computer technology, dental assistant, massage therapy, medical assistant and practical nursing.
