INVISIO Headsets nominated for award at Soldier Technology 2010

INVISIO Headsets' communication solution INVISIO X50 has been nominated for the "Best lightweight Soldier Technology Award" at the 2010 Soldier Technology event in London.

"The nomination is important to us as it was made by the Program Managers of the soldier modernization programs that were present at the event. It underlines that INVISIO's products offer quality and performance at the forefront and are very much valued by users operating in extremely demanding environments", says Lars Højgård Hansen, CEO of INVISIO Headsets.

The INVISIO X50 communication system is the world's first digital communication system with certified hearing protection and INVISIO's patented technology INVISIO Bone Conduction, which enables communication even in extreme conditions.

Soldier Technology is a 4 day premiere soldier modernization event, which is organized by Worldwide Business Research in London, United Kingdom. The event is directed at bringing various manufacturers and suppliers of defense products to one platform. It is attended by generals, senior officials etc in the defense sector.
