Top Global Herbalife Distributors Gather for Annual Leadership Conference, Participation in Education & Training to Further Company's Purpose-Driven Approach to Nutrition

LOS ANGELES--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- As a Company whose purpose is to make the world healthier and happier, global nutrition company, Herbalife (NYSE:HLF), is hosting more than 2,500 top independent Herbalife distributor leaders, from around the world, for several days of education and training in Los Angeles, where the Company was founded in 1980. Education and training sessions will be conducted by global leaders and the Company's senior executives, keynoted by CEO Rich Goudis on Friday.

"The theme of this year's Honors event is 'Be the Difference,' and that's what these amazing distributor leaders exemplify — creating inspiring results for a better life through nutrition and opportunity," said Goudis. "The world-class education, training and personal development received this weekend is designed to inspire and motivate our distributors to continue leading their organizations to fulfill our purpose of making the world healthier and happier."

In addition to learning about how the Company is offering positive solutions to the global megatrends of high obesity rates, a rapidly aging population, rising public healthcare costs, and an increased interest in entrepreneurship by people of all ages, distributors gather from around the world to share best practices, increase social engagement and community.

Over the past year, the Company has increased its investments in the education and training experience, including in-person and online nutrition and fitness master classes, as well as the development of several dedicated fitness and nutrition portals with engaging and informational videos featuring numerous experts. At this event, and major regional events throughout the year, the Company is implementing university-style education programs where distributors can customize their experience by selecting from among a variety of classes offered — focused on product and nutrition education, business acumen, technology, and personal development — that best fit their personal needs for growing their businesses.
