Del Frisco's Restaurant Group aims to donate more than $1 Million with the help of loyal guests. Diners can visit any Del Frisco's Restaurant Group location across the country to give back to those impacted by Hurricane Harvey.

"We are deeply saddened to see the devastation caused by Hurricane Harvey," said Norman J. Abdallah, CEO of Del Frisco's Restaurant Group. "As a Texas based company, this storm has impacted many of our friends, family, team members, and guests and our thoughts are with all those impacted. It is our honor to engage our restaurants across the country to raise much needed money to support the Houston area food banks that are feeding those in need."

While all of the company's Houston-area restaurants that closed during the storm to ensure the safety of guests and employees will be open tomorrow, Del Frisco's Restaurant Group is providing payment to all Houston-area employees that were unable to work this week. Internal efforts are also underway through DFRG FEED Employee Support Fund, in which DFRG employees can make donations to support fellow employees affected by Hurricane Harvey and all employee donations will be matched 100 percent by Del Frisco's Restaurant Group.
