Cyren Launches Free Online Web Security Test for SMBs and Enterprises

Evaluate your company's level of security in just 30 seconds, no software download required

MCLEAN, Va., Sept. 15, 2016 /PRNewswire/ -- Cyren (NASDAQ: CYRN) today announced the launch of a free web security assessment that allows anyone to test the effectiveness of their current web security in just seconds. To try the Web Security Diagnostic, click here.

Designed to give any business user a fast snapshot of their level of protection from web-borne threats, the new service harnesses threat intelligence from Cyren's automated global security cloud to provide an easy, yet oftentimes eye-opening self-assessment tool for companies looking to understand the real effectiveness of their web security.

With just one click, Cyren's security test performs a baseline diagnostic of a given organization's potential vulnerability to several cyberthreats and security policy risks, including:

- Common viruses
- Evasive viruses
- Botnet calls to Command & Control servers
- Phishing sites
- Anonymizer site usage

"With this quick, easy-to-use test, actual security performance can be checked by IT staff, C-level executives, or any Internet user on any device - in or out of the office," said Sigurdur Stefnisson, vice president of threat research at Cyren. "We have put Cyren's global threat intelligence to use for this diagnostic in a way that requires no time commitment and no effort from users. This security test is literally one-click and that's it."

The Cyren Web Security Diagnostic does not access any personal data, change any settings, or compromise a user's security in any way. For more information, visit the Web Security Diagnostic.
