Stockholm, Sweden

General introduction to the Swedish insider rules

This document shall only be used as general guidance and for information purposes only. Authoritative advice should be sought in each specific case if you have questions regarding potential insider problems. The regulations either constantly change or, in the case of the Market Abuse Act, constitute criminal offences, and thus it is important to understand that these are only general guidelines and one should always consult the actual regulations before taking any actions. It must also be remembered that references to documents, forms and web sites may become obsolete, and one should always consult the applicable sources to make sure that the information is correct.

The foundation of the Swedish insider legislation is mainly constituted by two statutes; the Financial Instruments Trading (Market Abuse Penalties) Act (2005:377), (the “Market Abuse Act”) and the Act concerning Reporting Obligations for Certain Holdings of Financial Instruments (2000:1087), (the “Reporting Act”). The former is a criminal statute dealing with various forms of insider offences that will be prosecuted by a public prosecutor if an offence is suspected, whereas the latter covers reporting obligations for statutory insiders and listed companies and non-compliance is subject to administrative sanctions imposed by the Swedish Financial Supervisory Authority (the “SFSA”). The regulations apply to a stock market company (a company whose shares are admitted to trading on a regulated market) hereinafter referred to as the Company.

The description below should only be seen as an overview and introduction to the legislation. All terms used below are defined in the original acts (in Swedish) and unofficial, translated versions of the terms are used in this document. In the event of uncertainty whether an action or omission is in compliance with the legislation, legal expertise should always be consulted.

THE MARKET ABUSE ACT

The prohibitions in the Market Abuse Act apply to all persons, regardless of whether they are working at the Company or not. The act delineates the boundaries for trading in securities in respect of which a person is in possession of insider information. The act is a criminal statute and has sanctions ranging from fines to several years imprisonment.

Insider information is information regarding a circumstance which has not been made public or which is not generally known and is likely to materially affect the price of financial instruments. The Market Abuse Act mainly deals with three different offences: insider dealing, unlawful disclosure of insider information, and market manipulation.

Insider dealing is committed if a person receives insider information and then on his or her own behalf or on behalf of any third party, through trading on the securities market, acquires or sells such financial instruments to which the information relates. The offence of negligent insider activities is committed if a person receives insider information and then negligently on his or her own behalf or on behalf of any third party, through trading on the securities market, acquires or sells such financial instruments to which the information relates.

Unlawful disclosure of insider information is an offence that is committed if a person intentionally discloses information which he or she realises or should realise constitutes insider information. The act contains an exception if the disclosure occurs as a normal part of the performance of a service, activities or obligations.

Market manipulation relates to the situation where a person who, either in conjunction with trading on the securities market or otherwise, acts in a manner which the person realises is likely to manipulate the market price or other terms and conditions in respect of trading in financial instruments or to otherwise mislead purchasers or sellers of such instruments. For an excerpt of the Market Abuse Act containing the relevant sections for the above text, please refer to Appendix 1.

THE REPORTING ACT

The provisions of the Reporting Act apply to so-called statutory insiders and the act also contains rules applicable to the Company. In essence (as further described below), the statutory insider must report his or her holdings of shares and other financial instruments in the Company together with related parties' holdings to the SFSA within five working days from the occurrence of the reporting duty or when the position as statutory insider arose.

General introduction to the Swedish insider rules

It is important to note that the Market Abuse Act and the Reporting Act apply in parallel and are not mutually exclusive.

Statutory insiders are persons working for the Company as employees or consultants holding a position at management level where they usually come into contact with insider information. In substance, statutory insiders are the Company's board members and deputy board members, managing director and deputy managing director, auditors and deputy auditors, as well as certain other individuals that typically have access to price sensitive information, and certain major shareholders. The reporting duty also applies to corresponding persons in the Company's parent company (if applicable) and, in certain cases, subsidiaries. For the complete list of statutory insiders please refer to the unofficial translation of section 3 of the Reporting Act contained in Appendix 2.

Furthermore, financial instruments held by certain related parties shall be aggregated with the statutory insider's holdings for the purpose of the Reporting Act. In substance, such related parties are the statutory insider's spouse, cohabitant, underage children and other related persons with whom the statutory insider has had a joint household for at least one year and, subject to certain prerequisites, legal entities over which the statutory insider has a substantial influence. The complete list of related parties can be found in Appendix 3, which includes an unofficial translation of section 5 of the Reporting Act.

Insider reporting according to the Reporting Act shall be made to the SFSA the first time a statutory insider position arises and then every time changes in the statutory insider's holdings in the Company occur. The easiest way to make the reporting is to complete, sign and submit a special form (form 502 when the position as statutory insider arises and form 503 when changes to the statutory insider's holdings occur), which can be obtained from the SFSA's website (www.fi.se). The reporting must be made within five working days from the occurrence of the reporting duty or when the position as statutory insider arose. The notification must include the statutory insider and his or her related parties' holdings.

Trading window and black-out period

The trading window opens one trading day after the publication of Cavotec's results (quarterly, half-yearly and yearly) and remains open until 30 days prior to a reporting date. In between the trading windows there is a black-out period.

During the black-out period there is an absolute prohibition for you and your related parties to Trade in the Cavotec share. The black-out period starts 30 days prior to a reporting date, and includes a prohibition to Trade on the date of the publication of the report. This is an absolute prohibition, i.e. regardless if you have Insider information or not, you and your related parties are prohibited from Trading in the Cavotec share during the black-out period.

Regardless if it is a trading window or not, you and everyone else are of course always prohibited from Trading in the Cavotec share when holding Insider information as per the general prohibition to Trade when holding Insider information as further described above.

General introduction to the Swedish insider rules

Statutory insiders' Trading must be disclosed to the SFSA within 5 working days.

Not all employees of Cavotec are "statutory insiders" and those persons who are not statutory insiders need not make disclosure to the SFSA. Please consult the General introduction to the Swedish insider rules in order to find out more about statutory insiders and their obligations.

As of October 2011, sanctions for non-compliance with the Reporting Act in this respect are imposed by a way of a special fine by the SFSA ranging from SEK 15,000 to SEK 350,000.

LOGBOOK

According to section 10 a of the Reporting Act, a Company is required to maintain a logbook of persons who are working for the Company as employees or consultants and who have access to insider information concerning the Company. This includes statutory insiders, but also other persons who have insider information without meeting the requirements for being statutory insiders. This is an obligation for the Company to include persons in the logbook that de facto have access to insider information, whereas section 3 primarily puts an obligation on the individuals, the statutory insiders (that is persons that hold positions where they normally get access to insider information, but do not necessarily have insider information), to report any changes in their holdings and to be prohibited from trading during the Black-Out Period (see above).

In the logbook the Company shall state the following:

- the reasons for why the person is included;
- the date when the person gained access to the information (the recommendation from the SFSA is that the time is also noted); and
- when the logbook was last updated.

Persons included in the logbook shall be informed by the Company in writing about what this involves when they are entered into the logbook. The logbook shall be continuously updated by the Company and saved for at least five years from the date when it was created or five years from the date when it was updated.

As of October 2011, sanctions for non-compliance in keeping a logbook are imposed by a way of a special fine by the SFSA ranging from SEK 15,000 to SEK 1,000,000.

APPENDIX 1 – EXCERPT FROM THE MARKET ABUSE ACT

N.B. this is only an excerpt from the Market Abuse Act and should not be relied upon for any decisions. The text is an unofficial translation of the Swedish original relevant as of October 2011. Before any decisions are taken the complete Act should be consulted.

DEFINITIONS

Section 1

For the purposes of this Act:

1. "Insider information" means information regarding a circumstance which has not been made public or which is not generally known and is likely to materially affect the price of financial instruments;

2. “Trading on the securities market” means trading on a regulated market or other organised marketplace or trading with or through any person who professionally conducts such activities as referred to in Chapter 2, section 1 of the Securities Market Act (SFS 2007:528);
3. “Financial instruments” has the same definition as in Chapter 1, section 4, first paragraph, subsection 1 of the Securities Market Act; and
4. “Regulated market” has the same definition as in Chapter 1, section 5, sub-section 20 of the Securities Market Act. (SFS 2007:564).

INSIDER DEALING OFFENCES

Section 2

Any person who receives insider information and who on his own behalf or on behalf of any third party, through trading on the securities market, acquires or sells such financial instruments to which the information relates shall be convicted of the offence of insider dealing and sentenced to a term of imprisonment not exceeding two years. The same shall apply to any person who receives insider information and who, through advice or in any other manner, causes any third party to acquire or sell financial instruments to which the information relates through trading on the securities market. Where the offence as referred to in the first paragraph is deemed minor, the perpetrator shall be convicted of the offence of insider dealing misdemeanour and sentenced to a fine or imprisonment not exceeding six months. Where the offence is deemed aggravated taking into consideration the scope of the transaction and other circumstances, the perpetrator shall be convicted of the offence of aggravated insider dealing and sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than six months and not exceeding four years.

The first and second paragraphs shall also apply to any person who possesses insider information which consists of knowledge of that person’s own criminal activities.

Section 3

Any person who negligently commits an offence as referred to in section 2 shall be convicted of the offence of negligent insider activities and sentenced to a fine or a term of imprisonment not exceeding one year. Liability shall not be imposed where the offence is minor.

Section 4

Any person who attempts to commit insider offences and aggravated insider offences shall be held liable in accordance with Chapter 23 of the Swedish Penal Code.

Section 5

Notwithstanding the provisions of sections 2–4:

1. officers of an undertaking that conducts securities operations by virtue of Chapter 2, section 1 or Chapter 4, sections 1 or 2 of the Securities Market Act (SFS 2007:528) may execute orders submitted to the undertaking to acquire or divest financial instruments and, without using insider information, perform activities which follow from agreements to maintain a market in one or several financial instruments or to provide advice for management engagements;
2. financial instruments may be acquired where the insider information is intended to reduce the price of the instrument and sold when the information is intended to increase the price of the instrument;
3. duties may be performed as are incumbent on any person pursuant to law or any other statute;
4. shares in a limited liability company or a European company may be acquired on behalf of a natural or legal person where the insider information solely consists of information concerning a measure, the object and intention of which is to lead to a public tender offer by the person or to an extended class of persons concerning acquisition of shares in the company;

General introduction to the Swedish insider rules

5. any holder of an option which has financial value may, upon expiry of the option term, sell or exercise the option in accordance with its terms and conditions;
6. the issuer of an option may, in conjunction with exercise, sell or acquire the underlying asset to which the option relates;
7. futures may be performed on the expiration date;
8. any person who holds an allotted subscription right or right of redemption which has financial value may sell the right or exercise such in accordance with its terms and conditions;
9. financial instruments other than shares may be acquired or sold where the acquisition or sale takes place without the use of insider information.

The provisions of this section relating to shares as contained in the first paragraph subparagraphs 4 and 9 shall also apply to share-related financial instruments such as subscription rights, interim certificates, options certificates, convertible debentures, debentures with warrants, participating debentures, share options and share futures. (SFS 2007:564).

Section 6

The provisions of sections 2–5 shall also apply to procedures in accordance with these provisions which do not constitute or cause trading on the securities market provided the procedures relate to financial instruments:

1. which are admitted to trading on a regulated market;
2. for which an application for admission to trading pursuant to subparagraph 1 has been submitted; or
3. the value of which is dependent upon a financial instrument pursuant to sub-paragraphs 1 or 2. (SFS 2007:564).

Section 7

Any person who intentionally discloses information which he or she realises or should realise constitutes insider information shall be convicted, with the exception of those cases where the disclosure occurs as a normal part of the performance of a service, activities or obligations, of the offence of unlawful disclosure of insider information and sentenced to a fine or a term of imprisonment not exceeding one year.

No liability shall be imposed where the information is placed into the public domain concurrently with disclosure thereof.

MARKET MANIPULATION

Section 8

Any person who, either in conjunction with trading on the securities market or otherwise, acts in a manner which he or she realises is likely to manipulate the market price or other terms and conditions in respect of trading in financial instruments or to otherwise mislead purchasers or sellers of such instruments, shall be convicted of the offence of market manipulation to a term of imprisonment not exceeding two years or, where the offence is minor, to a fine or imprisonment not exceeding six months. Where, taking into consideration the scope of the market manipulation and other circumstances, the offence is deemed aggravated, the perpetrator shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than six months and not exceeding four years.

Any person shall also be convicted of market manipulation where such person, in conjunction with trading on the securities market or otherwise, acts in a manner which he or she should have realised was intended to affect or mislead in the manner specified in the first paragraph. In such cases, the perpetrator shall be sentenced to a fine or a term of imprisonment not exceeding one year. Liability shall not be imposed where the offence is of a minor nature.

EXEMPTION

Section 9

The provisions of sections 2–8 shall not apply to trading in own shares in buy-back programmes or to stabilisation of financial instruments, provided that trading is conducted in accordance with Commission Regulation (EC) No. 2273/2003 of 22 December 2003 implementing Directive 2003/6/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council as regards exemptions for buy-back programmes and stabilisation of financial instruments. (SFS 2007:372)

FORFEITURE

Section 15

The proceeds of any offence committed pursuant to sections 2–8 shall be subject to forfeiture unless such is clearly unreasonable.

APPENDIX 2 – SECTION 3 OF THE REPORTING ACT

N.B. this is only an excerpt from the Reporting Act and should not be relied upon for any decisions. The text is an unofficial translation of the Swedish original relevant as of October 2011. Before any decisions are taken the complete Act should be consulted.

Section 3

Under this Act, the following persons are considered to have insider status in a stock market company:

1. directors or deputy directors of the company or its parent company;
2. the managing director or the deputy managing director of the company or its parent company;
3. an auditor or deputy auditor of the company or its parent company;
4. a partner in a partnership which is the company's parent enterprise, but not a partner with limited liability;
5. a holder of a senior position or another qualified assignment of a continuous nature in, or on behalf of, the company or its parent company, if such a position or assignment may normally be assumed to involve access to information which may influence the price of shares in the company and which has not been made public;
6. a holder of a position or an assignment in accordance with sub-sections 1-3, or another holder of a senior position in a subsidiary, if it may normally be assumed that such a person has access to information concerning circumstances which may influence the price of shares in the company and which has not been made public,
7. a person who holds shares in the company corresponding to at least ten per cent of the share capital or of the votes for all shares in the company or who holds shares to this extent together with a person or legal entity closely related to the shareholder in the manner described in section 5, paragraph one;
8. a person whose related parties in accordance with section 5, paragraph 4 or 5 holds shares in the company, corresponding to at least 10 per cent of the share capital or of the votes for all shares in the company.

General introduction to the Swedish insider rules

At the request of the stock market company or its parent enterprise, the Swedish Financial Supervisory Agency (Sw. Finansinspektionen) shall determine the question of whether an executive or holder of an assignment has a senior position or a qualified assignment as referred to in paragraph one, sub-sections 5 or 6.

As regards European Companies what is stated in paragraph one regarding directors is applied for directors or deputy directors of the governing, management, or supervisory body.

APPENDIX 3 – SECTION 5 OF THE REPORTING ACT

N.B. this is only an excerpt from the Reporting Act and should not be relied upon for any decisions. The text is an unofficial translation of the Swedish original relevant as of October 2011. Before any decisions are taken the complete Act should be consulted.

Section 5

For the purpose of the application of the first sentence of section 4, paragraph one, the following shares in the stock market company are equated with shares owned by the person who has a reporting obligation, namely shares which are owned by:

1. the spouse or cohabitant of the person who has a reporting obligation;
2. minors who are under custody of the person who has a reporting obligation;
3. other related parties of the person who has the reporting obligation than the ones in sub-section 1 and 2 with whom the person who has the reporting duty has had a joint household for at least one year;
4. a legal entity over which the person who has a reporting obligation exercises a material influence and in which the person who has a reporting obligation or any party referred to in sub-section 1-3, or several of them together, hold:
 - ownership participation amounting to ten per cent or more of the share capital or the participation rights; or
 - financial participation involving the right to receive ten per cent or more of the return; or
 - voting participation amounting to ten per cent or more of the number of votes for all shares or the number of shares in the highest decision-making body.
5. a legal entity over which the person who has a reporting obligation exercises a material influence and in which the person who has a reporting obligation or a person referred to in sub-section 1-4, or several of them together, hold ownership participation, financial participation or voting participation as referred to in sub-section 4.

If several persons have a reporting obligation for the same shareholding or for changes in the holding, reports need only be made by one of them.

Appendix: Guidelines to prevent insider trading

A Code of Conduct for Directors, Officers, and Employees of Cavotec SA (Cavotec) and its subsidiaries to prevent insider trading

2016-10-04

To: _____

Important information

These guidelines are only intended to help Cavotec employees in their understanding of Cavotec's policy to prevent insider trading. They must be read together with the General introduction to the Swedish insider rules, full policy including the appended overview of applicable legislation. The guidelines are for information purposes only and authoritative advice should be sought in each specific case if you have questions regarding potential insider problems.

Compliance with the guidelines is not an assurance of immunity from insider trading regulations.

RULE 1

Don't Trade Cavotec Securities if you have inside information about Cavotec.

"Insider information" is information of a precise nature, which has not been made public, and which if it was made public, would be likely to have a significant effect on the prices of Cavotec's financial instruments or related derivative financial instruments.

Possible examples could be, but are not limited to:

- an unannounced significant proposed acquisition of or sale to another company or business;
- an unannounced change in credit rating or a material breach of a banking covenant;
- an imminent announcement about Cavotec's financial performance or a change to its financial position;
- an unannounced change in dividend;
- an undisclosed profit forecast;
- a significant change in the volume of business which is not publicly known or reflected in the latest financial statements;
- the termination of or entry into material contracts, which are not publicly known; and
- a change in key senior personnel.

It is important to note that this list is not exhaustive and even if you have information that is not mentioned on the list, such information can still constitute Insider information. If you know of any of these things or any other matters likely to constitute inside information, you should not Trade in Cavotec Securities until those matters become public.

Appendix: Guidelines to prevent insider trading

Remember that even if you do not have Insider information about Cavotec you need approval to Trade.

Trades of Cavotec Securities are only allowed if they have been approved by Cavotec and are completed in compliance with the insider policy, as briefly described in Rules 2 to 5 below. This procedure requires the applicant to be able to certify that the proposed Trade is not being made on the basis of Insider information.

Note: All Cavotec directors, officers and all employees are required to follow this procedure if they intend to trade in Cavotec Securities. Compliance is not a guarantee that the employee will not be exposed to insider trading liability.

RULE 2

Before you Trade, you must obtain the consent of Cavotec's Chief Financial Officer by completing the Request for Consent form attached.

Failure to obtain this consent will be treated seriously. Full and accurate disclosure of all relevant facts must be made when completing the Request for Consent form.

RULE 3

Trading must be completed within the same day + 1 of such consent.

A new Request for Consent must be completed and the necessary consent obtained for trades which will be completed more than 1 day after a previous consent was given.

RULE 4

Trading window and black-out period.

The trading window opens one trading day after the publication of Cavotec's results (quarterly, half-yearly and yearly) and remains open until 30 days prior to a reporting date. In between the trading windows there is a black-out period.

During the black-out period there is an (absolute) prohibition for you (and your related parties) to Trade in the Cavotec share. The black-out period starts 30 days prior to a reporting date, and includes a prohibition to Trade on the date of the publication of the report. This is an absolute prohibition, i.e. regardless if you have Insider information or not, you and your related parties are prohibited from Trading in the Cavotec share during the black-out period.

Regardless if it is a trading window or not, you and everyone else are of course always prohibited from Trading in the Cavotec share when holding Insider information as per the general prohibition to Trade when holding Insider information as further described above.

RULE 5

Trade only in your name or the name of your spouse or children except with the written consent of Cavotec's Chief Executive.

To Trade only in your own name or the name of your spouse or children will increase transparency.

Appendix: Guidelines to prevent insider trading

RULE 6

Avoid short term Trading.

You should avoid Trading in Securities over a short time period, say 3 months. No person in the Cavotec group of companies may engage in short term Trading unless there are exceptional circumstances discussed with and approved by Cavotec's Chief Executive.

RULE 7

Don't Tip.

Intentionally disclosing Insider information to others could breach insider trading regulations.

RULE 8

Only disclose Insider information to other persons within the Cavotec group of companies when they "need to know" it for the purposes of their job.

Insider information should not be freely discussed by employees other than for work purposes and information should be shared only in accordance with the obligations and procedures in the insider policy.

RULE 9

Only disclose Insider information to third parties if the disclosure occurs as a normal part of the performance of a service, activities or obligations.

Insider information should not be disclosed to third parties unless the disclosure occurs as a normal part of the performance of a service, activities and information should be shared only in accordance with the obligations and procedures in the insider policy.

RULE 10

Don't mislead others.

A person who acts in a way that the person realises (or should realise) is likely to manipulate the market price or other terms and conditions in respect of Trading in Securities or to otherwise mislead purchasers or sellers of such instruments could breach insider trading regulations.

RULE 11

If you have Insider information about another company or industry, act in accordance with the above guidelines.

You can breach insider trading laws without being employed by the company or in the industry that the information concerns.

RULE 12

Trading by persons discharging managerial responsibilities must be disclosed to the Company SFSA within 3 working days.

Not all employees of Cavotec are such persons and those persons who are not need not make disclosure to the SFSA. Please consult the insider policy and its appendix in order to find out more about statutory insiders and their obligations.

Appendix: Guidelines to prevent insider trading

RULE 13

If in doubt - Don't!

These rules are not exhaustive. Compliance is not an assurance of immunity from insider trading liability.

The laws have unexpected and far reaching effects. They may affect conduct which all concerned parties might consider to be perfectly ethical. Accordingly, you should seek authoritative advice if you have any reason to wonder about the application of these guidelines.
