

President and Chief Executive Officer Paul Cofoni Resumes Active Daily Leadership and Management of CACI

Mr. Cofoni and Senior Executive Team Confirm Confidence in CACI Growth

Arlington, VA, August 4, 2008 - CACI International Inc (NYSE:CAI), announced today that its President and Chief Executive Officer, Paul Cofoni, has resumed full-time daily leadership and management of the company after having successful heart bypass surgery in June. During Mr. Cofoni's recovery, CACI President of U.S. Operations Bill Fairl had assumed the duties of Acting President and Chief Executive Officer.

"It's fantastic to be back at CACI," Mr. Cofoni said. "I am delighted to rejoin Bill Fairl and everyone on our senior management team. I take great pride in how they performed during my recuperation, and how all our CACI people remained focused on our clients and their critical missions. My team and I have the greatest confidence in CACI's continued growth and success."

Mr. Cofoni continued: "This is an exciting time for CACI. We are successfully implementing business and hiring initiatives that are growing our company and increasing the capabilities we can offer our clients. We're meeting our goal of providing innovative and valuable solutions for our government's most complex challenges in national security and global terrorism. And we are continually recognized for our outstanding technical and ethical reputation. I couldn't be happier than being at the helm of this exceptional organization and its 12,100 talented and dedicated employees. They are achieving our vision of being the very best in everything we do."

CACI Chairman of the Board Dr. J.P. (Jack) London commented, "We are very pleased to have Paul back on board, and I am personally grateful his recovery is going so well. Paul Cofoni is a rare leader who has a vision of success, acts on it decisively and effectively, and inspires the best in all of us."
