

Compuware Publishes New Whitepaper: "Why Load Testing From the Cloud Doesn't Work"

Paper Details How Load Testing From the End-User Perspective Safeguards Websites and Company Revenue

DETROIT, July 22, 2011 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Compuware Corporation (Nasdaq:CPWR), the technology performance company, today announced that it has published a new whitepaper titled: "Why Load Testing From the Cloud Doesn't Work." The paper explores how load testing web applications from the cloud is not the answer to resolving website performance issues and how testing from the end user's perspective is the only way to understand what customers are experiencing.

This white paper outlines:

- The evolution architecture and structure of Web applications;
- The current state of load testing approaches and how they apply to a variety of architectures;
- How existing and emerging testing techniques are applied to different types of applications and;
- The future architecture of Web applications and what it means to the future of testing.
