Departure of Directors or Certain Officers; Appointment of Certain Officers.

After two years with DynCorp International, Tony Smeraglinolo announced that he will be leaving the company to pursue other opportunities. His resignation will be effective as of December 3, 2010. Steven Gaffney, Chairman and CEO of DynCorp International, said “Along with being a great colleague and friend to many of us here at DI, Tony has provided strong leadership throughout the Global Stabilization and Development Solutions division. We are grateful for his contributions.”

Mr. Gaffney continued, “Over the past several months I have been working to determine the best way to strengthen our shared future for the company. Strong leadership, shared values and operating as one team are essential to moving our company from good to great. To make our goal of one team with one mission a reality, we need to move away from thinking of ourselves as two separate divisions.”

Consistent with this one team vision, DynCorp International announced that Steve Schorer will be named president of DynCorp International. Mr. Schorer first joined DynCorp International in April 2009 as president of the Global Platform Support Solutions division and his strong leadership and business skills will help keep the company on its desired growth path. In this role, Mr. Schorer will report to the Mr. Gaffney, and the two operating segments, Global Stabilization and Development Solutions and Global Platform Support Solutions, will remain intact with all business areas reporting into him.

Mr. Gaffney stated that, “Together – and with Steve Schorer as president – we will work to continue to grow our current markets, expand our service offerings, achieve operational efficiencies, improve our processes and adhere to our core values so that we can increase customer satisfaction and loyalty.”
