Ria and Walmart Expand Walmart2Walmart Domestic Money Transfer Service

Consumers can now send up to $2,500 with Walmart2Walmart

LEAWOOD, Kan., Oct. 25, 2016 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Ria Money Transfer, in collaboration with Walmart, today announced the expansion of the Walmart2Walmart domestic money transfer service for customers seeking to send up to $2,500.

In 2014, Walmart and Ria introduced the Walmart2Walmart money transfer service to provide customers with a low-cost product that allowed them to transfer up to $900 between more than 4,600 Walmart stores nationwide. Now customers wishing to send as much as $2,500 can enjoy the simple, convenient, reliable Walmart2Walmart service powered by Ria, while saving more of their hard-earned money. Sending up to $2,500 will cost $18 through Walmart2Walmart, while competitive offerings charge as much as $50 to send $2,500.

"We have enjoyed working with Walmart to provide our customers with an easy-to-use product at a great value and we are excited that customers will now have a broader product selection to enjoy the simplicity of Walmart2Walmart when transferring money to their loved ones. We will continue to work collaboratively with Walmart to give our customers high quality products at an exceptional price," said Michael J. Brown, Euronet's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer.

Ria has been recognized as one of Walmart Services' outstanding service providers, earning Walmart's Service Provider of the Year award in two consecutive years. These awards are a reflection of the high quality of the Ria services together with the value the Walmart2Walmart product provides to consumers as well as the strong, collaborative relationship Ria and Walmart share.

Ria is the licensed money transfer operator for all Walmart2Walmart domestic money transfer transactions. Walmart acts as the authorized agent of Ria.
