Some of the factors which could cause EA's future performance to differ materially from the estimates and projections for the interactive entertainment industry as a whole include the following: consumer demand for, and the availability of an adequate supply of, current-generation and next-generation hardware units; sales of the Company's titles; consumer spending trends; the seasonal and cyclical nature of the interactive game segment; timely development and release of Electronic Arts' products; competition in the interactive entertainment industry; the Company's ability to manage expenses during the remainder of fiscal year 2007; the Company's ability to predict consumer preferences among competing hardware platforms; the Company's ability to secure licenses to valuable entertainment properties on favorable terms; the Company's ability to attract and retain key personnel; changes in the Company's effective tax rates; adoption of new accounting regulations and standards; potential regulation of the Company's products in key territories; developments in the law regarding protection of the Company's products; fluctuations in foreign exchange rates; and other factors described in the Company's quarterly report on Form 10-Q for the quarter ended September 30, 2006.
