Safe Harbor Statement

The Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 provides a "safe harbor" for forward-looking statements. Except for statements of historical fact, information included in this communication (as well as information included in oral statements or other written statements made or to be made by FactSet) contains statements that are forward-looking, such as statements relating to the future anticipated direction of the financial information industry, plans for future product development, planned capital expenditures, anticipated sales growth and potential subscriptions and contracts.

This Web site contains certain forward-looking statements that are subject to numerous risks and uncertainties, certain of which are beyond FactSet's control, including: the impact of general economic conditions in the U.S. and in countries in which FactSet and its subsidiaries currently do business, industry conditions, the adoption of new financial markets regulations and changes in how they are interpreted and enforced, increased competition and changes in the competitive landscape, the lack of availability of qualified personnel or management, fluctuations in foreign exchange or interest rates, and stock market volatility.

Such forward-looking information involves important risks and uncertainties that could significantly affect anticipated results in the future and, accordingly, such results may differ from those expressed in any forward-looking statements made by or on behalf of FactSet. These risks and uncertainties include, but are not limited to, those relating to development and expansion activities, dependence on existing management, financial activities, domestic and global economic conditions, changes in federal or state tax laws, and market competition factors.

FactSet's actual results, performance, or achievement could differ materially from those expressed in, or implied by, these forward-looking statements and, accordingly, no assurances can be given that any of the events anticipated by the forward-looking statements will transpire or occur, or if any of them do so, what benefits, including the amount of proceeds, that FactSet will derive from them. The materials on this Web site that address FactSet's financial or business outlook apply only as of the date the information was issued.
