

L-1 Identity Solutions Technology is Critical to the World's Largest Iris Recognition Application in India

STAMFORD, Conn., Aug 25, 2009 (BUSINESS WIRE) -- L-1 Identity Solutions, Inc. (NYSE: ID), a leading provider of identity solutions and services, today announced that its iris recognition technology is being successfully used as part of the world's largest iris-based identity management project in India. L-1's state-of-the-art SIRIS biometric matching engine is facilitating the de-duplication of records dispersed across multiple disparate databases and systems containing the iris codes of 56 million citizens. The program was awarded to L-1 through a regional partner on behalf of the State government of Andhra Pradesh.

"Our iris recognition algorithms and enabling technologies continue to power the largest and most complex identity-related applications around the world," said Robert V. LaPenta, Chairman, President and CEO of L-1 Identity Solutions. "In developed and developing countries, L-1 technology is doing more than acting as a protective measure, it is an enabler. A biometric-based system provides a simple and universal method of granting access to government-issued goods and services, much of which is critical for everyday survival, particularly for those that live below the poverty line."
