

NTELOS BECOMES ONE OF ONLY THREE WIRELESS COMPANIES TO LAUNCH THE MOTOROLA Q

Offers Cutting Edge Smartphone To Its Customers

Waynesboro, Va. – NTELOS Wireless recently announced that it has become only the third wireless provider to offer the new Motorola Q. The Q offers the latest smartphone technology and allows NTELOS Wireless to set itself apart from many of its national competitors. The Q is aimed at bridging the gap between the home and office with features such as wireless e-mail, a 1.3 mega-pixel camera, Windows Media © Player, Internet access and Bluetooth capabilities. The Q can also double as a portable media center as users can play music or watch videos on its 2.4 inch color screen.

In an age where technology is key, NTELOS is proud to offer its current and future customers one of the most exciting phones on the market today, said Mike Minnis, NTELOS director of public relations.

"We are not only offering the hottest new phone, but at a special introductory price of $99.99 that is the lowest in the market," Minnis said. "Combine that with the best rates on data packages and you see why NTELOS is the best value in wireless."

With the addition of NTELOS' Intellisync Wireless E-mail service, the Q can send and receive personal or corporate e-mail, and store calendar dates, contacts, etc. Also, with its 0.45 inch design the Q offers all of the components of a laptop with the portability of a blackberry.

The Q's design team developed the model with its users in mind, focusing on functionality and layout, Minnis explained. Each detail of the highly developed phone has been tailored for usability, from the raised key pad to the high resolution screen the Motorola Q offers much more than the standard smartphone.

"As we look toward the future we will continue to offer our best in class wireless plans coupled with the newest phone technology," Minnis said. "Offering the latest phones in combination with spending more than $100 million the past two years on network expansions and upgrades proves our commitment to providing the best value in wireless. This commitment continues as we plan to spend $50 million to enhance our entire wireless network in 2007." NTELOS Inc. is an integrated communications provider with headquarters in Waynesboro, Va. NTELOS provides products and services to customers in Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio and North Carolina, including wireless phone service, high-speed DSL (high-speed Internet access) and local and long distance telephone services.
