comScore Appoints Five New Members to its Board of Directors

New Board Members Bring Decades of Executive Experience Across Media, CPG, Technology and Financial Industries to comScore

RESTON, Va., June 9, 2017 /PRNewswire/ -- comScore announced that its board of directors has appointed five new members, effective today: Lisa Gersh, former CEO of Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia and co-founder of Oxygen Media; Mark Harris, CFO of Hercules Capital, Inc.; Jacques Kerrest, CFO of Intelsat; Joshua Peirez, President of The Dun & Bradstreet Corporation and Susan Riley, former CFO of several prominent apparel and CPG companies. These appointments increase the total number of comScore directors from seven to 12.

"I'm delighted to welcome these five new directors to our team, each of whom has an impressive, proven track record of helping companies capitalize on new opportunities and deliver value to their respective shareholders," said William Henderson, chairman of the comScore Board of Directors. "As the Board works with Gian Fulgoni, our CEO, and his executive team to move the company to the next level, we strongly felt that these individuals bring the best mix of skills and experience necessary to help the company in its efforts to provide attractive returns to our shareholders."

"I couldn't be more pleased to have these five distinguished leaders join our board at this point in time," said Gian Fulgoni, chief executive officer of comScore. "We have tremendous talent and valuable assets here at comScore, and I'm delighted that our new directors recognize the potential and that they're eager to play an important role in helping us as we deliver a new generation of powerful advertising and cross-platform measurement solutions to our clients."
