TheStreet Launches Content Partnership with Symphony

TheStreet's content is now available to Symphony's audience of financial professionals around the world.

NEW YORK, May 23, 2018 /PRNewswire/ -- TheStreet, Inc. (NASDAQ: TST), a leading financial news and information company, today announced a new partnership with Symphony Communication Services, LLC, the cloud-based collaboration platform that connects markets, organizations and individuals.

TheStreet®

TheStreet's breaking news and market analysis will now be a part of Symphony's content partner ecosystem, available to all 320,000 of its licensed users, globally.

"With easy access to TheStreet's independent reporting, Symphony users will be able to quickly consume and share our content for fast decision-making and collaboration," said David Callaway, CEO of TheStreet, Inc. "Together with Symphony, financial professionals everywhere will benefit from our insider's edge and fresh approach to the markets."

The platform of choice for the financial services industry, Symphony is powered by an open and growing app ecosystem, and protected with customer-owned encryption keys. The communication platform increases workflow productivity while maintaining global regulatory compliance and eliminates inefficient workflows to boost productivity in information-driven businesses.

"We are excited to offer TheStreet's app to Symphony's growing community of users," said Jonathan Williams, Global Head of Partners, Symphony. "With this app, TheStreet is giving financial professionals the ability to integrate timely, quality news into their team's workflow without ever leaving the Symphony platform."
