VWR and Scientist.com Collaborate to Create an End-to-End Online Research Solution

RADNOR, Pa., Oct. 17, 2017 /PRNewswire/ -- VWR (NASDAQ: VWR), the leading global independent provider of product and service solutions to laboratory and production customers, today announced its collaborating with Scientist.com, the leading global online marketplace for research services. VWR customers in the U.S. can now purchase thousands of custom products and research services through The VWR Science portal powered by Scientist.com.

Both VWR and Scientist.com seek to accelerate scientific progress by reducing complexity when sourcing the tools and technologies needed to drive innovation. Scientist.com's network of 2,100 qualified suppliers provides access to thousands of custom products and research services, including protein production, chemical synthesis, next generation sequencing and the entire range of investigational new drug (IND) studies. This collaboration will enhance VWR's current product and service offering to scientists, researchers, educators, medical professionals and engineers.

"We are excited to offer this unique solution that enables our customers to source what they need for their research," stated Manuel Brocke-Benz, CEO of VWR. "By leveraging Scientist.com sourcing capabilities, VWR customers now have access to an extended network of CRO suppliers who can support their research and laboratory needs."

"VWR's large global presence will enable Scientist.com to help tens of thousands of pharmaceutical, biotech, government, non-profit and academic researchers," stated Daniel Kagan, Scientist.com's Chief Operating Officer. "Together VWR and Scientist.com enable researchers to more easily test their next potentially game-changing idea."

VWR and Scientist.com look forward to expanding this offering to customers in Europe and Asia later this year. To visit The VWR Science portal powered by Scientist.com, click here.
