

America Online and WebMD Launch New Online Health Resource for Consumers

AOL Health Channel with WebMD Helps Members Manage Health and Wellness Online with Credible Content and News, Health Assessment Tools, Active Communities and More

DULLES, VA, and ELMWOOD PARK, NJ, April 25, 2002 - America Online, Inc., the world's leading interactive services company, and WebMD Corporation (NASDAQ: HLTH) today announced the launch of the new AOL Health Channel with WebMD. The newly-launched channel, found at AOL Keyword: Health, combines WebMD's objective and credible healthcare content, tools and educational services with America Online's convenient and easy-to-use online features.

The new AOL Health Channel with WebMD is part of the comprehensive, strategic alliance between America Online and WebMD Corporation announced last year. Under that agreement, WebMD became the primary provider of healthcare content, tools and services across all America Online brands. Through this alliance, WebMD's wide array of health and wellness offerings, including information on diseases and conditions, expert Q&A and health e-tools, are available to the tens of millions of AOL members and the users of AOL's other Web-based brands.

"This new AOL Health Channel with WebMD provides our members with the best content, products and community in an area very important to them, all wrapped in AOL's user-friendly and convenient package," said Donn Davis, President of AOL's Vertical Markets Group. "In addition, we believe we have developed new compelling opportunities for advertisers and partners to connect with this audience."

"As the site most trusted by consumers and most recommended by physicians, WebMD is committed to providing the highest quality health information available online and to developing objective programming and content that helps consumers make informed decisions about their health," said Roger Holstein, CEO, WebMD Health. "Our broad reach - which is enhanced by our relationship with AOL - enables us to distribute our content, tools and services to the largest and most targeted group of action-oriented, health-involved consumers online."

As part of the previously announced alliance, AOL and WebMD will join forces to offer creative and compelling advertising, programming and commerce solutions for pharmaceutical, medical device and consumer packaged goods companies. These solutions will help advertisers and partners reach the broadest consumer health audience online, bringing valued customers to their brands and services. AOL and WebMD will share revenue from these opportunities.

The new AOL Health Channel with WebMD offers a convenient and comprehensive one-stop destination for AOL members who want to better manage their health and wellness. Key features of the new AOL Health Channel with WebMD include:

- Convenient access to WebMD content, found throughout all areas of AOL Keyword: Health and integrated into AOL's easy-to-use keyword and search functions. The new channel will have an even greater focus on current health content, featuring updated news on medical breakthroughs, scientific studies in the news and more. In addition, there are several new content areas including Clinical Trials and Mental Health.
- More robust Condition Centers, allowing members to more conveniently access a wealth of information on a range of diseases and conditions, whether they're newly diagnosed,

- living with a chronic illness or caring for a loved one who is suffering.
- Numerous new health assessment tools and tests, such as Illustrated Disease Guides and Anatom-e-Tools that show what happens in one's body when a disorder takes hold; Find a Physician (a national doctor database); the birth plan; Allergy Proof Your Home (learn what can set off allergic reactions and how to avoid); Healthy Refrigerator (learn how to stock up on healthy foods); Air Quality Map (for air quality levels in your area) and much more.
 - New and enhanced information resources and functionality that will be introduced in the months ahead, including easy and unlimited access to WebMD's Health Member Services with a full range of newsletters and community offerings.
