The corrected release reads:

WASHINGTON GAS ENERGY SERVICES, INC. EXPANDS ITS RETAIL ELECTRICITY MARKET OFFERS TO PENNSYLVANIA - OFFERS SAVINGS AND RENEWABLE OPTIONS TO RESIDENTIAL AND BUSINESS CUSTOMERS

Washington Gas Energy Services, Inc. (WGES), a leading competitive supplier of electricity and natural gas to business and residential customers in the Mid-Atlantic region, announced today that it is expanding its footprint to include Pennsylvania and has begun making offers to customers located in the PPL Electric Utilities service territory. WGES' offers provide savings and alternative energy options to Pennsylvania customers.

Residential customers in the PPL territory may choose a fixed price of 9.3 cents per kilowatt hour through their January 2011 meter reading. This is a unique and distinctive offer because it is not only one of the lowest priced options - at more than 10% lower than PPL's Price to Compare - it also includes 5% clean, renewable wind power harvested from wind farms located in the mid-Atlantic region.

"We are thrilled to now offer our products and services to the customers in Pennsylvania," said Harry Warren, President of WGES. "WGES has more than a decade of experience reliably serving residential and commercial customers in the Mid-Atlantic region with competitive electricity options. We are committed to reducing the impact of energy use on the environment by including clean, renewable wind power in every electricity sale to residential and small commercial customers since 2001."

WGES also offers longer term fixed price options to residential customers of 9.6 cents per kilowatt hour for two or three years. Customers may also choose renewable options including 50% or 100% wind power and should visit the WGES website at www.wges.com for more information.

Commercial customers also have options. WGES works with larger commercial customers to develop customized electricity products to meet their individual electricity needs. Standard options available to small commercial customers include a one, two, or three-year fixed price of 9.7 cents per kilowatt hour that includes 3.5% local wind power. In addition, they can choose renewable options including 50% or 100% local wind power and should visit the company's website at www.wges.com to review all available offers.
