YAHOO! REPORTS FIRST QUARTER 2010 RESULTS Display Advertising Grew 20% Year Over Year

SUNNYVALE, California, April 20, 2010 – Yahoo! Inc. (NASDAQ: YHOO) today reported results for the quarter ended March 31, 2010.

Revenues were $1,597 million for the first quarter of 2010, a 1 percent increase from the first quarter of 2009. Income from operations for the first quarter of 2010 was $188 million, compared to $101 million in the first quarter of 2009.

“We had a good quarter, delivering income from operations higher than our outlook,” said Yahoo! Chief Executive Officer Carol Bartz. “Thanks to our efforts, our search share has stabilized, and we grew display advertising by 20% year over year. More importantly, guaranteed display grew by 24% as advertisers took advantage of the science, art and scale that only Yahoo! can offer.”

Under our Search and Advertising Services and Sales Agreement with Microsoft Corporation, Microsoft agreed to reimburse Yahoo! for the cost of operating our algorithmic and paid search services following commencement of performance under the agreement (until the services are fully transitioned to Microsoft). Microsoft separately agreed to reimburse Yahoo! for transition costs up to an aggregate total of $150 million. Yahoo!’s results for the three months ended March 31, 2010 reflect $78 million in net reimbursements from Microsoft, including $43 million for net transition cost reimbursements and $35 million for search operating cost reimbursements.

Transition cost reimbursements from Microsoft in the first quarter include reimbursements for costs we incurred in 2009 as well as in the first quarter of 2010. In the future, quarterly transition cost reimbursements are expected to be roughly equivalent to quarterly transition costs. Search operating cost reimbursements are expected to continue each quarter until Yahoo! has fully transitioned to Microsoft’s search platform. We view search operating cost reimbursements as an indicator of the long-term cost savings associated with full implementation of the search agreement.

Net income per diluted share for the first quarter of 2010 was $0.22, compared to $0.08 in the first quarter of 2009. Net income per diluted share for the first quarter of 2010 included a benefit of $0.05 per diluted share related to the sale of Zimbra, Inc. and $0.02 per diluted share related to transition cost reimbursements from Microsoft.

“We made important strides on several measures in the first quarter,” said Yahoo! Chief Financial Officer Tim Morse. “Our operating margin improved and we began redeploying capital into share repurchases and value-creating acquisitions. Our operating income growth and expanded margins this quarter demonstrate the success of our efficiency efforts as well as the first tangible benefits of our search agreement with Microsoft.”

Yahoo! Inc.
Note to Unaudited Condensed Consolidated Statements of Income

This press release and its attachments include the non-GAAP financial measures of free cash flow, total expenses (GAAP cost of revenues plus GAAP total operating expenses) less traffic acquisition costs (“TAC”), total expenses less TAC, D&A, and SBC, non-GAAP net income, and non-GAAP net income per diluted share, which are reconciled to cash flow from operating activities, total expenses (GAAP cost of revenues plus GAAP total operating expenses), net income attributable to Yahoo! Inc., and net income attributable to Yahoo! Inc. common stockholders per share-diluted, which we believe are the most comparable GAAP measures. We use these non-GAAP financial measures for internal managerial purposes and to facilitate period-to-period comparisons. We describe limitations specific to each non-GAAP financial measure below. Management generally compensates for limitations in the use of non-GAAP financial measures by relying on comparable GAAP financial measures and providing investors with a reconciliation of the non-GAAP financial measure to the most directly comparable GAAP financial measure or measures. Further, management uses non-GAAP financial measures only in addition to and in conjunction with results presented in accordance with GAAP. We believe that these non-GAAP financial measures reflect an additional way of viewing aspects of our operations that, when viewed with our GAAP results, provide a more complete understanding of factors and trends affecting our business and operating costs. These non-GAAP measures should be considered as a supplement to, and not as a substitute for, or superior to, cash flow from operating activities, total expenses, net income attributable to Yahoo! Inc., and net income attributable to Yahoo! Inc. common stockholders per share-diluted calculated in accordance with GAAP.

Free cash flow is a non-GAAP financial measure defined as cash flow from operating activities (adjusted to include excess tax benefits from stock-based compensation), less net capital expenditures and dividends received. We consider free cash flow to be a liquidity measure which provides useful information to management and investors about the amount of cash generated by the business after the acquisition of property and equipment, which can then be used for strategic opportunities including, among others, investing in the Company’s business, making strategic acquisitions, strengthening the balance sheet, and repurchasing stock. A limitation of free cash flow is that it does not represent the total increase or decrease in the cash balance for the period. Management compensates for this limitation by also relying on the net change in cash and cash equivalents as presented in the Company’s unaudited condensed consolidated statements of cash flows prepared in accordance with GAAP which incorporates all cash movements during the period.

Total expenses less TAC is a non-GAAP financial measure defined as total expenses less TAC. TAC consists of payments made to Affiliate sites and payments made to companies that direct consumer and business traffic to the Yahoo! Website. We consider total expenses less TAC to be a useful indicator of our operating costs. We exclude TAC from this measure because TAC generally varies based on the revenue we earn from traffic supplied by our Affiliates, and doing so assists investors in understanding the operating cost structure of our business. A limitation associated with the non-GAAP measure of total expenses less TAC is that it does not reflect TAC. Management compensates for this limitation by also relying on the comparable GAAP financial measures of cost of revenues and income from operations, each of which includes TAC.

Total expenses less TAC, depreciation and amortization (“D&A”), and stock-based compensation expense (“SBC”) is defined as total expenses less TAC, D&A, and SBC. We consider this measure to be a useful indicator of our cash operating costs. We exclude TAC from this measure because, as noted above, TAC generally varies based on the revenue we earn from traffic supplied by our Affiliates, and doing so assists investors in understanding the operating cost structure of our business. We exclude D&A because while tangible and intangible assets support our businesses, we believe excluding the related non-cash D&A costs will aid investors in understanding the cash costs associated with operating our business. We exclude SBC due to the variety of equity awards used by companies, the varying methodologies for determining SBC, and the assumptions involved in those determinations, we believe excluding SBC enhances the ability of management and investors to understand the impact of SBC on our operating results. There are limitations associated with the non-GAAP measure of total expenses less TAC, D&A, and SBC. First, it does not reflect TAC. Management compensates for this limitation by also relying on the comparable GAAP financial measures of cost of revenues and income from operations (each of which includes TAC). Second, it does not reflect the periodic costs of certain capitalized tangible and intangible assets used in generating revenues in our businesses. Management evaluates the costs of such tangible and intangible assets through other financial measures such as capital expenditures. Third, it does not include SBC related to the Company’s workforce. Management compensates for the second and third limitations by also relying on the comparable GAAP financial measures of operating expenses and income from operations (each of which includes D&A and SBC).

Non-GAAP net income is defined as net income attributable to Yahoo! Inc. excluding certain gains, losses, expenses, and their related tax effects that we do not believe are indicative of our ongoing results. In reporting results for fiscal 2009 and its interim periods, we adjusted non-GAAP net income to exclude stock-based compensation expense and its related tax effects. Beginning this quarter, we no longer exclude stock-based compensation expense and its related tax effects. For comparison purposes, prior period amounts have been revised to conform to the current presentation. We consider non-GAAP net income and non-GAAP net income per diluted share to be profitability measures which facilitate the forecasting of our results for future periods and allow for the comparison of our results to historical periods. A limitation of non-GAAP net income and non-GAAP net income per diluted share is that they do not include all items that impact our net income and net income per diluted share for the period. Management compensates for this limitation by also relying on the comparable GAAP financial measures of net income attributable to Yahoo! Inc. and net income attributable to Yahoo! Inc. common stockholders per share - diluted, both of which include the gains, losses, expenses and related tax effects that are excluded from non-GAAP net income and non-GAAP net income per diluted share.
